MURDER IN THE AIR

THE shots that tore into the shoulder Brigadier General Kassem could have been fired at the orders of Cairo or the Communists. Certainly they do not look like the work of a lone crank. But the mind boggles at the bloodbath that would have enguifed Iraq had the assassin succeeded in eliminating the one man in this seething, tempestuous and violent land who stands for national independence.

Not one of his cohorts auggest themselves as trustworthy successors. Bereft of their monarchy the focal point of national nliegiance. Only Kassem realises this, it seems, but he is a poor substitute for Feisal. And once Kassem goes, civil war is inevitable. Maybe worse.

ZASSEM'S prestige has never been high. An instigator of regicide, he has been guilty of desecration in the eyes of many Iraqis. Yet as a revolutionary has both lacked the personal dynamism and popular following of his people to succeed. Politically independent, his chief role has been to play off contending factions without with either. Politically weak, he has preferred compromise and retreat to asserting authority. Rightly so, perhaps. The reaction to last month's executions showed how shaky was his i authority. His stars have never been in the ascendant. The knowledge that his adversaries now feel strong enough to precipitate his downfall may chasten and subdue this reluctant here of the revolution. The Iraqi Premier can reflect that he has been only a little luckler than Bandaranaike, Gandhi, Linquat Ali Khan and Feisal. But time is running out. Murder is in the air. Personalities

Sir Winston Churchill led a parade of top political personalities back into Parliament today.

Only one member of the Conservative Government was defeated, and he had a minor job. That was Sir Ish Horobin, Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Power, who was defeated in the "cotton belt" area of northern England,

Sir Oswald Mosley failed in his bid for election,

The first negro ever to run for the House also was defeated. One of the most colourful personalities to be elected was Britain's greatost postwar neval hero, Commander J. S. Kearns. It was Kearns who in 1949 brought the British frigato Amethyst down the Yangtee River through the devastating fire of Chinese shore batteries, A film, "Yangieo Incident," was made of the exploit,

For Sir Winston Churchill it was his 15th election victory. He has run for Parliament 19 times, and has been defeated four times. He has been elected nine successive times since 1924.

Sir Owwald tried to get elected on a programme of white supremsey in the raciallytense Notting Hill district of London. He polled 2,821 votes out of some 30,000 cast. Labour's Dr D. T. Pitti, the first negro ever to run in a British election, was defeated in London's Hampstead district.

Olympic runner and television personality Mr Chris Chatsway, won his first election try at Lewisham North with a 4,613 Conservative majority. In the first hours of the returns, there were no major upacts. Labour Party leader, Mr Hugh Galiskell returned with a reduced majority. WAGES:

Pope John has raised the wages of minor Vatican employees well above the corresponding rates in Italy "so that they can have the essential minimum to live decorously."

Cardinal Domenico Tardini, who is the Vationa Storetary of State, said the Vatican wages bill had been raised by more than 50 per cent.

The government has hit out at the English-educated elite. who they claim have been "devitalised, almost emasculated as a result of deculturisation." They hope to make Malay the medium of Instruction in institutions of learning, the language of the administration and judiciary. Now, talks between Singapore and the Federation on fiscal, industrial and trade policies are to be held here. These talks will also cover other pan-Malayan subjects such as immigration, posts, telecommunications and income tax.

The trade talks will aim at securing an integrated common market policy and a pan-Malayan industrial development programme in which there will be no duplication or overlapping. All these things are being done to facilitate a merger in the future. The Federation can do without Singapore as its world port. It would be an inconvenience in the beginning for the state of the Federation. in Malaya, according to the last census, the Malaya outnumber the Chinese in the proportion of 3.1 to 2.3 million. There are an estimated one million Chinese against 150,000 Malays in Singapore today.

Racial

A union of the two states would swell the number of Chinese to 3.3 million against 3.2 million Malays.

The Malays' fear of being swamped in the land of their birth by other races, especially the Chinese, has always been strong. It is for this reason that the Alliance government here has adopted Islam and Malay as the national religion and language of the country with special privileges made to safeguard

Malay rights and interests. Singapore's eagerness to merge with the Federation also stems from economic grounds. Trade is Singapore's lifeblood; and much of the new state's prosperity lies in the role it plays as the "clearing house" for both the Federation's export and import

There is considerable feeling here that a .merger between Malaya and Singapore is inevitable because both territories have too much in common, and the division itself is only manmade. But even then with the emergence of the PAP in Singapore, the Federation has decided to adopt a "wait and see"

For this is a priority project: one of Russia's new boarding schools. Khrushchev set the pace in a speech last May: "The time is not far distant," he said, "when all with the R.A.F., after travelling our children will, if their parents agree, be deep down that it is the serious | brought up in boarding schools."

This project is dear to Communism; it leaves both parents free to work and it gives the authorities ever-increasing opportunities to train the children to be good little Communists. Ordinary schools are being converted into boarding schools. with classrooms rebuilt as dormitories. They are open to any pupil.

And there are buildings like the prefabricated five-storey school at the end of my road going up all over the Soviet

The Russians estimate that by the end of 1965 about 2,500,000 Russian children will be living in boarding schools.
What are these schools like? Well, to an Englishman they seem to be a mixture of school, technical college, holiday camp, and political centre, spiced with some of the more pagan aspects of English public school life. Fees are graded according to the parents' income and range from 30 to 300 roubles (£1 to £10) a month; the State provides the rest, and it has been estimated that the cost of keeping a child at a boarding school is about 800 roubles a month.

(The average wage for the whole of Russia is 800 to 900 roubles a month. Realistic conversion; 28 roubles for £1.)

Discipline . . .

As in all Soviet schools political education occupies an important place in the syllabus. And, far removed from the old days, the children taught ballroom dancing. portment, table manners, and the finer points of etiquette. Some of the schools have their own printing presses and furniture-making shops. The work they produce is sold and the money is turned over to the schools.

Malraux, the rebel, gets an appeal he ignore cannot

POIGNANT personal drama faces famous 58-year-old French novelist, Andre Malraux, who is Minister for Culture in the present government and, in addition, General de Gaulle's closest intellectual companion. It is a case which would merit an excellent theme for a play by Malraux's redoubtable political foe, Jean Paul Sartre.

The theme of the play would be the case of a novelist whose work continues to make converts to Communism long after he had ceased to be one himself, and had become a fiery nationalist instead.

'Responsible'

The other week Malraux was confronted with the force of the contradiction.

A life-long friend of his, and one of France's most eminent painters, has told him that his son, awaiting his call up, would rather desert than serve in the army in Algeria.

Anguished by the consequences of such an action, the father appealed to Malraux for help in ensuring that his son would not be asked to serve in family.

And in appealing to Malraux he could not help telling him: You have some responsibility in this matter. Your writings have shaped this boy's thinking." To his great credit Mairaux has responded to the appeal with warm generosity. For a man of such sharp intellect. Seen here is eight-year-old Bert Furse of Clapton, London, who learnt to swim when he was four (because he lived near a river, and his parents were afraid he might fall in) and could swim a mile when he was six.

Last week he took on Olympic champion Judy Grinham over one length of the pool at Edmonton - and, with six seconds start, covered the 33-1/3 yards in 22.4 seconds to beat her!

Now his docker father Albert claims that Bert is the fastest kid swimmer in Britain, and to prove it, he is ready to award a cup to any boy or girl under nine who can beat Bert over 33-1/3 yards. Photo shows Bert and champion Judy taking off. - London Express Photo.

"There's the time factor," he points out "At fly-half, one things spontaneously does almost instinctively. At fullback there is usually time to consider, to assess the moment to make a bid.

"The full-back is more individual than the fly-half, who is essentially part of the team or machine. The back must be self-confident almost to the point of cockiness. At least, that's how it seems to me."

Bartlett thinks there is a great future for the attacking full-back, providing the wingers can be persuaded to drop back in defence when not in play.

They May Keep The Sunday Rule And Quit World Cup

By ROY PESKETT

Football in Northern Ireland, which was swept to a pinnacle of interest by the great win over Italy last year and success in the World Cup, is facing a crisis.

Plans to rebuild the side after their 4-0 defeat by Scotland last Saturday wait upon a vital decision which the Irish F.A. Council must take later this month.

It is whether to enter the 1962 World Cup competition. Deadline for the entry is December 15-and the chances are only 50-50 that Ireland will compete.

Eyes Closed

There is still such tremen-Northern Ireland team playing abroad on a Sunday that it is not certain that the threequarters majority for a change of rule will be reached.

If the vote is 3-1 in favour, an extraordinary general meeting will be called to alter Rule 32 which bans Sunday football

The team competed in the 1958 Cup in Sweden only after several heated meetings. But the issue was shelved.

This eye-closed decision cannot be taken this time. And I learned in Belfast over the week-end that there is a chance that Ircland will have to with-

That would be fatal. It is hardly likely that many European countries would wish to play Northern Ireland if they have no connection

> This would enable the other British entrants to concentrate on their qualifying matches for the 1962 World Cup.

It was obvious at Windsor Park on Saturday that several of the Irish players who have so faithfully served their ecuntry in recent years are nearing the end of the international road.

Wilbur Cush, Bertle Peacock, Alf McMichael, and Peter Me-Parland all found the pace too much for them.

But until the vital vote is taken, young players like Billy McCullough (Arsenal), Jimmy Hill (Norwich), John Park (Linfield), and Billy Humphries (Leeds), must wait.

The Scottish rebuilding plan get off to a great, is slightly fortunate, start. The two young inside forwards, Donnis Law, who has made his mark in less Speech, 100 to 7 Macquario, 20 to 1 Admiral's Lark, Fire-guard, Guersillus, Sanctum and English football, and the rangy John White who will become an even bigger target for the bigmoney clubs, have started a Falls of Shin, King's Coup, renaissance which is very good Major General, Marshal Pil, for football.

> Law, who has filled out a lot since he last played for Scotland, is justifying the tremendous falth Matt Busby has in him. He lay well back and did a great deal of foraging.

The turning point fascinating game was the 35thminute penalty miss by Jimmy McIlroy, a carelessly taken shot which rolled outside the post.

Ireland were then down 2-0, and a goal wold have put them right back into the game. In the English League secore Leggat started the scoring; results published in yesterday's Hewie got the second from a China Mail, all the teams which penalty when Gregg pulled were shown as home teams down the Fulham winger; White should have been away teams, and Mulhall got the others.

Election Boom On London Stock Market

Closes At New High

London, Oct. 8. The London Stock Exchange held the liveliest session in its history today, in the apparent expectation that the Tories would win today's elections.

As 35 million voters went to the polls to elect 630 members of parliament, the Stock Exc' ange registered a record total of 22,101 transactions, or 822 more transactions than on June 2, when the previous record was set.

The boom was not as marked just before the elections started, because some investors were tempted at the last minute to sell out at a profit. But this bid was easily absorbed and all sections of the industrial market shared in the boom includ-. ing steels which, despite the threat of renationalisation, in case of a Labour victory, closed at a new high.

H.K. & P.E. Invest. . 11.80 Singapore To Tighten Ship Clearance

Facilities

Singapore, Oct. 8. The Government has decided to tighten rules regarding the issue of advance clearances to ships calling here, Mr R. L. Richard, the Master Attendant, said. In a circular to shipping companies here, he said that this policy was needed "owing to occurrences of misuse of advance clearance facilities. From now on advance certificates, would only be issued to ships which had the appropriate and valid loadling. safety and radio certificates, and had completed loading all entgo, bunkers, stores water. If a shipowner were to commit two breaches of thesa requirements, he said, advance port clearance facilities might be withdrawn from all vessels under his ownership.—China Mail Special.

BUILDING

two-storey building, to be known as the Fan Ling Magistracy, is to be constructed by Government at the Fan Ling roundabout.

Designed by the Hongdong firm of architects, Palmer and Turner, the new building will provide accommodation for two magistrates courts and a juvenile court. The magistrates courts will occupy the first floor while the juvenile court will be located on the ground floor.

The whole building will be air-conditioned and there will be a private entrance for mogicirates. -A four-storey building, con-taining 30 flats for married Government servants, will be erected on the same site for the accommodation of staff members of the Judiciary, the Police and the Commerce and Industry Department.

Piling work on both the magistracy and the quarters will begin next month and actual construction work will start towards the end of the year. The whole project is expected to be completed in twelve months. Tenders for the construction work are called for in today's
